Our Mission

To improve the lives of the citizens of Bucks County who suffer from a serious mental illness or, as family members and caregivers, share the burden of these devastating illnesses.

Our mission is accomplished through programs designed to support, educate and advocate for individuals with a mental illness and their family members. We strive to educate the public about the true nature of mental illnesses and combat the stigma and discrimination often faced by people with these serious brain disorders.

Our programs educate individuals with mental illness to better understand their illness, stressors, and how to live in recovery. We help families to understand and be supportive of loved ones with mental illness. We also advocate for training of teachers, law enforcement, and first responders to recognize and respond appropriately to individuals with mental illness.

I search my mind and joys I find
Joy is sunshine, joy is rain
Joy is good health and free from pain
Joy is the splendor of a smiling face
Not the rush of a frenzied race
Joy is a happy goal to seek and behold
Joy destroys weary, it is not dreary
Joy is delightful, it chases frightful
Joy is a rosebud covered with dew
With a beautiful red colored hue
Joy is laughter in a happy home
Children playing and not alone
Joy is freedom and lots of love
Spreading out to the skies above
Joy is a happy heart
Brought by kindness which is very smart
God gives the gift of joy
But we must look and seek and employ
Joy opposes war
There is too much greed we are fighting for
Joy is peace and a world that is sane
Joy is soldiers coming home again

Winter Wonder
By Dorothy McClellan
November 26, 2008

Soft falling snow, cups of hot cocoa.
Little gray snowbirds, reindeer herds.
Red berry bushes, ice that crushes.
Green trees of pine,
little glasses of wine.
The moon is high and far away.
The stars twinkle, they are at play.
Children make snowmen big and fat
With a carrot nose and a black sloppy hat.
Everyone likes to ride in a sleigh.
When we go to Grandmom’s
we sing all the way.
Sleds are great too.
They go fast down the hill
when the snow is new.
Put on your snow gear,
your boots and gloves.
Let’s partake of winter loves.
Winter is a wonder
like summer thunder.
It’s given to us by the God of seasons
He is smart, he has his reasons.
On Friday, January 15, 2010, the second class of 24 new CIT (Crisis Intervention Team) officers graduated. The graduation took place at the main lobby of the Bucks County Community College Lower Bucks Campus which has been very generous in facilitating the 40 hour program.

CIT is an innovative, first-responder model of police-based, crisis intervention developed with community, behavioral healthcare, and advocacy partnerships. Charles Bechtel, Agnes McFarlane and Carol Meholic represent NAMI Bucks on the CIT Task Force, which has put together this training. 21 Officers from Bensalem Twp., Northampton Twp., Middletown Twp., Lower Southampton, Lower Makefield Twp., Newtown Twp., New Britain Twp., 2 officers from Bucks County Corrections and 1 from Bucks County Adult Probation/Parole participated in the week-long training leading to the certification as a CIT officer. CIT, which originated in Memphis, TN, is designed to help police officers effectively respond to individuals in crisis whose behaviors bring them in contact with law enforcement.

CIT is a jail diversion program designed to improve the outcomes of police interactions with individuals whose behavior is influenced by mental illness, substance use, mental retardation and related conditions. Officers learn to recognize psychiatric distress and other conditions and how to de-escalate a crisis — avoiding officer injuries, consumer deaths and tragedy for the community. In addition, CIT officers learn how to link people with appropriate treatment, which has a positive impact on fostering recovery and reducing recidivism.

Research has proven that CIT training reduces arrests, the use of restraint, citizen and police officer injuries, hospitalization, and vastly improves the safety and satisfaction of all involved.

Those who live in the above named townships--as well as Bristol Twp. and Borough--who need help from police are encouraged to ask for a CIT officer when placing a call. There are now about 50 trained officers throughout the southern end of the county. The next training will be held the week of May 17th.

NAMI Bucks Launches NAMI Connection Recovery Support Group

NAMI Connections has come to Bucks County. NAMI Connection Recovery Support Groups are open to all adults with mental illness, regardless of diagnosis. Please feel welcome to drop by and share your feelings, difficulties, or successes. Everyone is a valued participant. Anyone with a family member or friend with mental illness who needs support in their recovery process can encourage them to attend a NAMI Connection group, too. Let them know how good it is to be with others who can say, “I’ve been there, I understand.”

NAMI Connection groups offer a casual and relaxed approach to sharing the challenges and successes of coping with mental illness. Each group:

- Meets weekly for 90 minutes
- Is offered free of charge
- Follows a flexible structure without an educational format
- Does not recommend or endorse any medications or other medical therapies

There is no need to register—just come when you feel like you need someone to talk to. The groups are led by trained individuals who are in recovery themselves. They understand your daily challenges and can offer you encouragement and support. All groups are confidential—you can share as much or as little personal information as you wish.

Too often, mental illness is an isolating experience, accompanied by profound anxiety. For those diagnosed with a mental illness such as depression, bipolar disorder, schizophrenia, or other condition, talking with someone to share coping strategies and insights, as well as problems and concerns, can be an important link in the path to recovery. NAMI Connection is a recovery support group program for people living with mental illness that is expanding in communities throughout the country. These groups provide a place that offers respect, understanding, encouragement, and hope.

Connection groups meet on Monday evenings at 6:30 at the Doylestown Mennonite Church at 590 North Broad Street, Doylestown, PA 18901 and on Wednesday evenings at 6:30 at the Penndel Life Program at 152 Monroe Avenue, Penndel, PA 19044. For more information, please call 1-866-NAMI(6264).
They’re Living Proof Recovery is Possible

August 31, 2008, Courier Times, Jo Ciavaglia

A peer-to-peer education program is designed to help people with mental illness learn how they can recover and manage their disease.

Unconditional family support and great medical care still couldn’t coax Betsy Kirk out of her small world.

How could people understand what it’s like to experience the unpredictable and dramatic mood swings associated with bipolar illness? Even she couldn’t accept the diagnosis.

That is until she found others with life stories that sound like hers.

“I met people who had gone through the same or graver situations than myself,” she said. “It made a huge difference.”

That difference was a nine-week program designed to show people struggling with mental illness how they can manage their symptoms and lead regular lives.

An estimated 26 percent of American adults – about one in four – suffer from a diagnosable mental disorder, according to the National Institute of Mental Health. Only about 6 percent of Americans, or 1 in 17, suffer from serious, potentially debilitating mental illness, such as major depression, schizophrenia or bipolar disorder.

The National Alliance on Mental Illness developed the Peer-to-Peer program in 2000. It has expanded to 31 states, including Pennsylvania. For three years, Bucks County’s NAMI chapter has offered the free program, which is starting new classes next month.

What makes the course unique is that it’s taught by people who’ve overcome their own struggles with mental illness. “A lot of times, peers are more likely to listen to someone in the same shoes as them,” said Debbie Moritz, director of the NAMI Bucks Chapter. “They can be able to relate to them.”

Many of the program’s 120 graduates received training and return as mentor specialists and mental health advocates, said Kathleen Campbell, president of the NAMI Bucks chapter.

“It’s very important to have people in recovery who are well-educated about their illness and understand their illness and understand what they need to do to recover and accept that they have an illness,” Campbell said.

Peer-to-peer class topics include social stigma, discrimination, illness relapse prevention and planning, coping strategies, medication awareness, addiction, relationships and advance directives.

To be diagnosed with mental illness is typically a major traumatic experience that can be difficult to accept, Campbell said. Shock, denial, and bargaining are common first reactions people experience.

“You’ve got something wrong with your brain and it’s not going away,” she explained.

Often people can find themselves unable to move beyond their feelings of anger, disbelief, resentment and guilt after being diagnosed and that can prevent them from moving toward accepting their condition and move on with their lives, Campbell said.

After meeting others with mental illness, including her instructors, in the peer-to-peer program, Kirk learned she could make a difference in the lives of people like her.

The Doylestown resident later became a peer-to-peer mentor. In June, she was named director of NAMI’s Lower Bucks Consumer Club, a social outlet for people with mental illness.

“I did not know this – until I ventured away from my small world – that there are many of us,” she said. “We’re isolating, when we shouldn’t be.”

Her experience is one that Steve Polomchak understands. The Penndel resident was diagnosed as bipolar in his 20s. Until three years ago. Much of his free time revolved around the Xbox game system. It’s not that he didn’t have ideas; he had plenty, but no direction. A friend encouraged him to join the peer-to-peer program.

“I’d been doing a lot of thinking, but not a lot of acting,” he said. “People had been asking me to do other things, but I didn’t know if I could do it, if I was important.”

Polomchak, 47 learned he was not only important but he was not alone.

“I had focused on my own [illness], but didn’t know about others and what they go through and their symptoms and experiences and how to relate to them,” he said. “It was a beginning of knowledge.”

It’s that knowledge that Polomchak passes on to others as a peer-to-peer mentor and public speaker. Many of the students he taught now work or volunteer with mental health services.

“It’s not just people teaching you, but people who’ve gone through things like you,” he said.

“They’re living proof that recovery is possible.”

Teen Mental Health Problems: What Are The Warning Signs

(NAPS)-The teen years can be tough for both parent and child. Adolescents are under stress to be liked, do well in school, get along with their family and make important life decisions. Most of these pressures are unavoidable and worrying about them is natural. But if your teen: is feeling extremely sad, hopeless or worthless, these could be warning signs of a mental health problem.

Mental health problems are real, painful and can be severe. They can lead to school failure, loss of friends, or family conflict. Some of the signs that may point to a possible problem are listed below. If you are a parent or other caregiver of a teenager, pay attention if your teen:

Is troubled by feeling:
- very angry most of the time,
- cries a lot or overreacts to things;
- worthless or guilty a lot;
- anxious or worried a lot more than other young people;
- grief for a long time after a loss or death;
- extremely fearful-has unexplained fears or more fears than most kids;
- constantly concerned about physical problems or appearance;
- frightened that his or her mind is controlled or is out of control.

Experiences big changes, for example:
- does much worse in school;
- loses interest in things usually enjoyed;
- has unexplained changes in sleeping or eating habits;
- avoids friends or family and wants to be alone all the time;
- daydreams too much and can't get things done;
- feels life is too hard to handle or talks about suicide;
- hears voices that cannot be explained.

Is limited by:
- poor concentration; can't make decisions;
- inability to sit still or focus attention;
- worry about being harmed, hurting others, or about doing something "bad";
- the need to wash, clean things, or perform certain routines dozens of times a day;
- thoughts that race almost too fast to follow;
- persistent nightmares.

Behaves in ways that cause problems, for example:
- uses alcohol or other drugs;
- eats large amounts of food and then forces vomiting, abuses laxatives, or takes enemas to avoid weight-gain;
- continues to diet or exercise obsessively although bone-thin;
- often hurts other people, destroys property, or breaks the law;
- does things that can be life threatening.

To find help, discuss your concerns with your teen's teacher, school counselor or others such as a family doctor, psychiatrist, psychologist, social worker, religious counselor or nurse.
